

SCHWARZMAN SCHOLARS

Schwarzman Scholars is a program designed to prepare future leaders to serve as intermediaries between China and the rest of the world by helping them understand China's culture, economy, governance and evolving role in the world. Up to 200 Scholars chosen annually from around the world for this highly selective, fully-funded program will have an unrivaled opportunity to live in Beijing for a year of study and cultural immersion, attending lectures, traveling and developing first-hand exposure to China, its people and a global group of promising leaders. Scholars will study for a one-year Masters degree in public policy; international studies; or economics and business at Tsinghua University, one of China's most prestigious institutes of higher education with a 100 year history of strengthening ties between China and the rest of the world and a record of producing leaders such as President Xi Jinping, former President Hu Jintao, and former Premier Zhu Rongji.

Scholars learn about the emergence of China as an economic and political force in the world through a core curriculum that includes history, economics, international relations, governance and leadership. They can then choose a concentration in public policy; international studies; or business and economics. All classes are offered in English with Mandarin courses mandatory for non-native speakers. They also learn beyond the classroom through substantive, thematic study tours around the country. Their leadership and professional capacities are further deepened by a mentoring program linking them to business, political and civil society leaders in the country, and through internships with global and national institutions and corporations based in Beijing.

A Schwarzman Scholar should demonstrate extraordinary leadership potential, strong intellectual capacity and exemplary character.

The program will build a professionally diverse cohort each year, and welcomes applicants from any undergraduate major who can articulate how the experience in China and with Schwarzman Scholars will help develop their skills as leaders in their fields. The largest number of applications will most likely come from fields and topics that are heavily influenced by trends in China, including but certainly not limited to economics, political science, sociology, history, business, public policy, international studies, environmental studies, energy, health, climate, urban studies, trade and others. However, the program welcomes and encourages applications from young leaders in any field relevant to issues influenced by or relevant to China.
